

"CITY OF CHICAGO" DRONES ON INTO NINETEENTH DAY

Record - Breaking Endurance
Monoplane is Still Going Strong

FAR SURPASSES RECORD

Light Rain Storm Adds Somewhat to Difficulties of Hunter Brothers

SKY HARBOR AIRPORT, Chicago, June 30.—(INS)—The record-smashing endurance monoplane City of Chicago was droning on into its nineteenth day of sustained flight today despite a fuel shortage which threatened to end the flight.

At 4.40 a. m. (E. S. T.) the plane piloted by John and Kenneth Hunter, of Sparta, Ill., then in the air for 444 hours, had surpassed by 24 hours the record formerly held by the St. Louis Robin.

A light rain storm driven by heavy winds added to the difficulties of the endurance plane crew shortly after dawn today when they tried to maneuver their second hand Simon-Detroit into position where fuel could be taken aboard from the supply plane.

The brothers seemed to be in no particular hurry to take on additional gasoline despite fears of the ground crew that the tanks were nearly empty. Instead, the endurance flyers prepared to fly high in an effort to ride above the squall winds.

Williams Completes A Bermuda-Return Flight

NEW YORK, June 30.—(INS)—Roger Q. Williams gathered in new laurels today after completing a whirlwind non-stop flight from New York to Bermuda and return in 17 hours and eight minutes.

Williams, a veteran flyer, who last year piloted the Pathfinder from Maine to Rome, flew the Bellanca monoplane, the Columbia, which Clarence D. Chamberlin skinned across the Atlantic to Germany three years ago.

He left Roosevelt Field, Long Island, at 5.02 Sunday morning and returned here at 10.10 Sunday night, resting the plane at Curtis-Wright airport at Valley Stream for the one landing of the day. The 1580-mile trip was the first round trip non-stop flight between New York and Bermuda. Erroll Boyd was relief pilot and Harry P. Connors the navigator.

The trip was considered remarkable by aviation experts because of Connors' ability in navigating a direct course to Bermuda, which, having an area of only 19 square miles, appears in the Atlantic as a mere pin point.

Williams reported good weather on most of the flight, although fog was encountered along with occasional showers.

At Hamilton, which they circled, the flyers dropped a mail bag, and then whirled toward New York.

The purpose of the flight, Williams said, was to demonstrate a regular fast air line service could be maintained between the Island and New York. According to Williams, a company to back such a service may be found.

Playground Will Open At Wood Street Tomorrow

One of Bristol's playgrounds is to open tomorrow morning, and will continue operation daily throughout the summer months.

Through efforts put forth by the Bristol Travel Club and by means of public contributions the opening of the Wood street school ground is made possible, and it is expected that several hundred children from all parts of the borough will be at the playground when the gates open tomorrow at nine a. m.

The Wood street playground is to be conducted throughout July and August, daily, and will be under the direction of Miss Alice Palmer, assisted by Miss Violet Hilgendorf. The hours are to be from nine to 12.

Both Miss Palmer and Miss Hilgendorf are members of the Bristol public school faculties, and have splendid knowledge of playground work.

There is a sufficient supply of apparatus to amuse the tots: swings, sliding-boards, "see-saws" and sand piles.

Included in the hand-work in which the boys and girls are to be instructed are the following: Basketry, yarn weaving, paper weaving, chair-caning, water-coloring and crayon work.

The Wood street playground, which is the only one to be conducted this year, has not been operated during the summer months for two seasons.

The playground is for the benefit of all children of the borough, and the parents are asked to cooperate by sending the tots for supervised morning play periods.

TO DISCONTINUE CLASSES

The sewing class of the Needlework Guild will discontinue its Tuesday afternoon classes until September.

HIBERNIANS CONTINUE AS LEAGUE PACE-SETTERS

Local Nine Defeats Croydon
Boys' Club by Score of 3 to 1

HARD-FOUGHT CONTEST

Schedule for Tonight
Federals versus Independents
Result of Yesterday's Game
A. O. H., 3; Croydon, 1
(By T. Juno)

CROYDON, June 30.—The Hibernians continued to set the pace of the Bristol Twilight League by defeating the Croydon Boys' Club here yesterday by the count of 3-1.

The game was hard-fought from the beginning until the end, and the victor was in doubt until the last man was put out.

"Gene" Lawler did the hurling chores for the "Hiboes" and worked in splendid fashion. He set the home team down with six hits and fanned ten batters. He seemed to be very invincible in the pinches, especially in the third when the Croydonites loaded the sacks with one out. He fanned the next batter and then forced the following batter to roll into an easy out.

Lawler blanked the Croydon team for six innings and in doing so ran the number of scoreless innings against the Hibernians' pitchers to fourteen. Up until the seventh inning of yesterday's game, an opponent of the A. O. H. team had not scored since June 19 when the Independents put over a run in the seventh inning.

In the last twenty-seven innings only two runs have been scored against the runner-up of the first half.

Tranotti was the home team's moundsman while Adams did the receiving. Both did a nice job of their work. Tranotti held the winners to but seven hits and only passed one stick. Although his mates erred four times the runs scored from his delivery were all earned with the exception of one. Tranotti also did his share with the batting club, getting two out of two and having the sacrifice fly which sent in the home team's only run.

Thompson and McGinley had 500 averages to lead the "Hibs" batting. Thompson had a single and a pass in three trips to the plate, and McGinley two singles in four tries.

The Hibernians scored two runs in the second inning. Thompson worked Tranotti for a pass; the runner stole second and went to third on a passed ball; Lawler sent a sacrifice fly to left, scoring Thompson; McGinley struck out; Rodgers singled to right; Dougherty flied to Crossley, who muffed the fly-scraper and then threw wild to third, allowing Rodgers to dent the plate.

The Croydon team filled the bases in the third but did not count. After Hamm was out, Tranotti bled to center; Tritschler doubled to the same spot and when Stromp drew a pass the sacks were crowded; Gleason struck out on three pitches; Adams rolled into an easy out, Lawler to Leyden.

A run was scored in the Hibernians' seventh. Leyden beat out a hit to deep short; Holden singled to left; Sullivan flied to Parrell; Brady sent a double to left field and Leyden scored; Thompson and Lawler were easy outs.

SOME FOLKS STILL BLIND AS TO DANGERS OF CELEBRATING INDEPENDENCE DAY IN MANNER IT WAS OBSERVED BY FOLKS YEARS AGO

Picnics and Community Activities Are Modern Ways of Observing July Fourth Instead of With Fireworks Which Left Trail of Deaths, Injuries and Property Damage

Will YOUR holiday be old-fashioned and noisy or safe and sane?

In a few years it probably will not be considered unusual to step into an "aerocar" in one's back yard and fly away on a thousand-mile trip or more, to visit a friend on a holiday. Times are moving at a rapid pace and many long-established customs are undergoing changes.

The old-fashioned way to celebrate the Fourth of July was by the roar of giant firecrackers, the boom of cannon and the glare of fireworks. Most of these hazardous explosives were set off by children or inexperienced folk, who frequently endangered their own lives and property. In fact, every Independence Day left a trail of dead and injured, of sorrow and suffering, with property damage amounting to many thousands of dollars. While this is still true to some extent, the modern way of celebrating by picnics and community activities, consisting of parades with floats, athletic contests and fireworks displays at safe distances from buildings and under the management of men experienced in the handling of powder, has resulted in greater safety for life and property.

Unfortunately, many people still like to be old-fashioned on the Fourth. Either they do not appreciate the danger or they deliberately close their eyes to it, gambling on the "other fellow" having the accidents, rather than themselves. The suffering and loss can be still further reduced if they will be careful and not permit the excitement of the occasion to run away with their better senses.

Here is a list of "don'ts" for parents. Let every father and mother study them and apply their teachings:

1. Don't forget that the first proof of Fourth of July patriotism is home protection.
2. Don't shut your eyes to real Fourth of July hazards: fireworks, automobiles, drownings, fire, firearms, falls, poisons.

3. Don't forget that your family might enjoy—as a safe and sane Fourth—some out-of-doors fun.
4. Don't forget—if you want safe fireworks for your children—that community fireworks are often quite wonderful.
5. Don't neglect, if you must have home fireworks, to see that they are the safest procurable.
6. Don't fail to talk frankly with your children—tell them why home fireworks are always dangerous.
7. Don't neglect to teach your children that patriotism does not consist in noise and life hazards.
8. Don't forget that it is worth a real effort to plan with your children a Fourth of July celebration that is exciting but not hazardous.
9. Don't fail to prove your community patriotism—by helping with a worth-while community celebration.
10. Don't forget, above all, that most Fourth of July accidents can be prevented.
11. Don't neglect to clear your premises of all rubbish.
12. Don't discharge fireworks near buildings. Get out in the open.
13. Don't let children play with matches. Keep matches out of their reach.
14. Don't let children throw sparklers. They remain hot for some time and are very dangerous.
15. Don't let children discharge fireworks unattended.
16. Don't let children stand too close to fireworks that are being discharged.
17. Don't let children pick up undischarged fireworks. They might explode in their hands. This has often happened, causing injury to hands, fingers and eyes.
18. Don't keep fireworks in the home uncovered. Keep them in a covered tin box until ready for use.

ATTRACTIVE WEDDING IN ST. ANN'S CHURCH

Louis Greco, of Tacony, Weds
Miss Jennie Rago, of Bristol

A RECEPTION FOLLOWS

St. Ann's Catholic Church was the scene of a very pretty church wedding Sunday afternoon at three o'clock when Miss Jennie Rago, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dominick Rago, of 315 Lincoln avenue, became the bride of Louis Greco, of Tacony.

The wedding march was played by Miss Frances Tamburella, of Dorrance street, as the bridal party entered the church and Father Marcellino Romagnolo, O. S. S. T., assistant rector of the church, performed the ceremony.

Miss Vera Scaldi, of Tacony, was maid of honor, and Miss Mary Rago, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid. Serving Mr. Greco as best man was Mr. Joseph Chiappetta, of Trenton, N. J.

The bride was beautifully costumed in a gown of white bridal satin, made princess style with panel front and back of rose point d'esprit lace, and silk net was set in sides of the skirt. The lace sleeves were long and the neckline was V-shaped and three lace rows were caught at the waistline on the left side. The bridal veil of tulle was edged with rose point lace and had three rows of ruffles across the (Continued on Page 4)

Admiring, learning that he was to return home from the national championship tournament, arranged to have the town's population give Hofmeister, who is the most widely acclaimed boy the town has ever had, given a welcome home that would be remembered for many months.

As he entered the town the parade met him and he was taken into the touring car and given a conspicuous seat on the back of the rear seat, while the throng of welcomers cheered him vociferously.

"Winnie," always modest, but now completely overcome by the acclaim of his friends and neighbors, could merely respond to them with a happy smile that made him one of the most (Continued on Page 4)

NELSON GREEN WINS TENNIS CHAMPIONSHIP

Conquers All Foes and Is Crowned Best Player
In Town

WON OVER LAWRENCE

Final play-offs in the Bristol Tennis Tournament were played on the Elks' courts, Buckley street, Saturday, with surprises being the result in some of the contests.

Green won over Lawrence in the men's singles, score being: 7-5, 6-8, 1-6, 6-4, 3-6.

The Green-Lawrence games marked quite an upset in the tournament matches, as Lawrence was seated in first place, and was looked upon as a winner.

Green has been Lawrence's pupil for several years, and he surprised many on Saturday when he defeated his instructor in a hard-fought match. In the junior singles Singer defeated Dries, 6-3; 6-2. Singer played a heavy game by driving the ball to Dries' backhand throughout the match. This marked the finals in the matches for the Courier trophy.

In the men's doubles Lawrence and Green defeated Pearson and Herr, games ending at 6-2, 7-5, 6-1.

The first prize in the junior contest was the Courier trophy; while the first award in the senior contest was the Independent trophy. Gold medals were awarded the winners in the doubles; and silver medals were presented to the runners-up.

Samuel Pearson acted as referee in all of the matches, and he likewise presented the prizes to the fortunate contestants.

Those conducting the tournament are much pleased at the manner in which the matches were run off in the record time of two weeks.

PLAN BIGGER PROGRAM FOR DOYLESTOWN FAIR

Every Day to Have A Special Program of Attractions

A WEEK OF FEATURES

DOYLESTOWN, June 30.—Steadily growing into one of the most educational and attractive county fairs in the United States the Doylestown Fair for 1930 promises to have a week of features that would do credit to any fair many times larger than Doylestown.

The Doylestown Fair dates this year are September 23, 24, 25, 26 and 27. At a meeting of the directors of the fair association last night plans for the 1930 fair were discussed. There will be numerous changes this year in the policy of operation.

Every day will be named this year and there will be a program appropriate for that day. Tuesday, opening day will be "Children's Day"; Wednesday will be "American Legion Day"; Thursday will be "Doylestown Day"; Friday will be "Horse Show Day"; and Saturday will be "Politicians' Day".

Featuring Wednesday at the fair this year "American Legion Day" will bring to Doylestown and to the fair grounds, several thousand veterans from Bucks, Montgomery, Lehigh and Philadelphia counties and others from Trenton.

Under the auspices of the A. R. Atkinson Post, No. 210, American Legion, of Doylestown, a drum and bugle corps contest will be staged on the race track in front of the grandstand on Wednesday night of fair week. Judges will be furnished by the Army and Marine Corps and the event will be one of the most elaborate and colorful ever planned for in the ninth Legion district. Above all cash prizes totaling $500 will be offered to the visiting Legionnaires so that competition will be worth while.

Another outstanding feature that will mark the Doylestown Fair this year as a national attraction will be the annual show and exhibition of the English Rabbit Club of America. For the past seven years this show has been held in Madison Square Garden, N. Y. At a meeting of the officials of that club two weeks ago it was unanimously decided to stage this show in conjunction with the Doylestown Fair. Entry blanks for the English Rabbit Show will be mailed in two weeks to members in every section of the United States. This show will be held in addition to the regular rabbit and cavy show a department managed by Marshall W. "Ray" of Doylestown.

The fair association officials, following out their policy of making Doylestown the cleanest fair in the state, will this year issue invitations to the volunteer fire companies of Bucks county to take an active interest in a firemen's midway in which concessions can be secured by the fire companies and operated by the firemen as means of raising funds for their own companies.

"The more local people we get interested in Doylestown Fair the better it will be," declared Dr. H. W. Turner, of New Hope, president of the fair last night. "There is no reason why Bucks county firemen should not have an opportunity to make money at a fair."

The installation of a complete amplifying system on the grounds this year will be a new feature. All advertising over the system will be abolished this year. Announcements will be made of the winners in the various show departments as they are judged. The drawing of horses and placing as well as many other inside stories of the harness racing game will be broadcast during the races in places of advertising.

Another new policy this year will be a horse show four days of the fair instead of only one day. To make this possible the fair officials last night authorized the building of a modern regulation horse show ring on the infield of the race track across from the grandstand. The ring will be fenced in. J. Stanley Lee, of Newtown, manager of the horse show department, announced that parking space will be sold to the horse show patrons around the show ring.

CORPORAL DEAN OF STATE POLICE RAIDS BOOZE PLANT

Gets Large Quantity of Moonshine and Mash at Williams' Farm

ONE MAN UNDER ARREST

Operator of Still Gives The Name of Harry Frank, of Philadelphia

A large quantity of moonshine and mash was seized when a still was raided in Middletown Township yesterday afternoon, and the sole occupant of the place, a man giving a Philadelphia address, was placed under arrest.

The one taken into custody: Harry Frank, 2316 South Tenth street. At the plant, located in a small shack on the estate of the late John Williams, Corporal Dean of the Morrisville detail of State Police, found 48 five-gallon cans of moonshine; 125 barrels of mash, and quantities of corn sugar and charcoal.

When Corporal Dean and his assistant arrived at the place they found the still in operation, being tended by Frank. Frank was placed under arrest and lodged in a cell at Morrisville, where he awaits a hearing today at four o'clock.

Indications pointed to plans and preparations being made for the erection of another still at the place. The building is located along a small stream which runs through the Williams place, and from this stream the water supply was received. It is thought the present place has been in operation about three months.

The structure which houses the still, which was one quite complete, is not of a particularly pleasing appearance. The shack is an old one, and has been located along the stream for some time.

The location selected by the individual or group setting up and operating the still is a distance from any main thoroughfare, being several hundred yards from either Durham road, or the main thoroughfare in Hulmeville. There are woods and bushes between the building and the roadways, and its location in a small hollow formed by the stream, also assists in making it inconspicuous.

Very little information could be gained from Frank who was found caring for the still as it was being operated. Intense grilling is to take place at the hearing.

SMALL MONEY

In the halcyon Harding days Albert B. Fall was a high-salaried cabinet officer and rancher. Especially about the time that a certain $100,000 changed hands "small money" didn't mean much to him.

Today he is an applicant for a Spanish war pension, which, under the new law just passed over the president's veto, pays a veteran $40 a month. How changed is the picture. The former secretary of the interior at 69 is old, broken and almost penniless.

Pension bureau officials say his service as a captain in the First Territorial Volunteer Infantry in 1898-99 entitles him to the pension.

The case of this former cabinet officer, who stands convicted of accepting a bribe, comes within the purview of the heated debate in congress while the pension bill was under discussion over the question whether a disability or dependency attributed to "vicious living" should come within the pension requirements.

Albert B. Fall's pitiful state can be traced to his betrayal of a public trust, but none will deny him that pittance of $40 a month nor gloat over his descent from the high places of public honor to his present status, discredited, poverty-stricken, friendless and helpless.

The American people feel they owe him a melancholy debt for an object lesson in the value of that fine sense of honor which he sacrificed to greed; for a demonstration of the power of integrity which he undervalued in his cynical belief that money makes right.

THE RACE

A marathon runner likens life to a foot race. St. Paul in his letters of nearly two thousand years ago used the same figure of speech:

"Wherefore, seeing we also are compassed about with so great a cloud of witnesses, let us lay aside every weight and the sin which doth so heavily beset us and let us run with patience the race that is set before us."

The analogy between a marathon and the race of life is, after all, not so complete as the simile suggests. Only those run marathons who choose to do so for the keen love of it. The hope of reaching the goal is the incentive and arriving is the reward. Pheidippides dying at the end of his marathon found his need in the shout of the people who acclaimed his feat. But for most the race of life is run without high reward.

The pure love of doing is denied millions who contribute each his undetected and often infinitesimal part to a product which is wholly impersonal. They run with patience the race, but without the cloud of witnesses, without the acclaim of this indistinguishable achievement except by those who are near to them in like service or dear to them in their homes.

The failure of so many, who run, to reach their goal is because they stop before they get their second wind. Most people never learn what their capacities are, because they do not run the race with continuing patience.

It may not be too soon to begin assigning "weeks" of various kinds for 1931.

THE PROCESS OF MORAL EVOLUTION

To the Editor of the Public Ledger:

Sir—In your issue of May 30 Mr. R. Howard Claudius makes his point that prohibition is "illegitimate" because it seeks to make a crime by the statute law of something that is not a crime by the moral law. This familiar argument of the Wets ignores the main point of the prohibition thesis: that a new moral law has come into being, which the prohibition statutes are merely seeking to re-enforce, that this new moral law has come as a result of our high-speed, highly industrialized society, in which the use of intoxicants is much more dangerous to society than ever before.

The anti-prohibitionist, in making the point mentioned above, often contrasts the prohibition law with the law against stealing. He points out that decent people are unanimous in regarding stealing as wrong. But he forgets that this has not always been so. In primitive society it was counted a virtue to steal from strangers and from all those looked upon as enemies. Children were taught to steal "like ladies and gentlemen." Our present public sentiment against stealing is the result of a long process of evolution in the field of ethics. Much more recent is the sentiment against lotteries, slavery and the traffic in narcotic drugs. With the complexity of our social structure increasing so rapidly at the present time, prohibition comes as another step forward in the process of moral and legal evolution.

SYNOPSIS

Dawn, mystery girl of the African tribe in the British East African Protectorate, is consecrated to become the mystic bride of the native black god, much to her horror, and that of Tom Allen, young plantation owner, in love with her. He learns she is white, not black. He whips her, bullies, who has designs on her. She conceals story to Captain Eric, German commanding officer, that Tom has violated Dawn's jungle vigil. Fearing native uprising, Eric, friend of Tom, decides to transport him to England. Natives assemble for Dawn's marriage ritual, as Tom, under escort of Shep and a dozen Askari guards, flies past.

INSTALLMENT NINETEEN

Behold Tom stood the armed Askari, but even without their support Shep ruled the situation. Tom could see nothing but certain suicide in further resistance. Dead, he could be of no service to Dawn. He must acknowledge himself beaten. But he made one resolve. He would return to avenge himself on Shep. If the war lasted until he was a grandfather, he would come back to Africa and repay this black tyrant for his cruelties.

He retreated a step or two and turned to cross the bridge. As he did so he felt the muzzle of Shep's pistol in his back.

"I ain't got no tricked no more like I did last night," he said.

"Tricked!" said Tom scornfully. "I took your whip away from you and gave you the sort of licking

Was she white, she wondered you've always deserved. And I'd do it again if you didn't have an army with you."

"Git gone," the whip man growled. "I'm anxious for you to git all de way out of Africa. When you git back to your England you needn't worry 'bout Dawn. Us black folks can take care of her even if she is a white gal."

Tom whirled on the bridge with such force that he set the fragile structure to swaying perilously. "Gun or no gun," shouted Tom, "remember this, you black bully, I'm coming back here. Don't forget it. Right back here to your own jungle. If I find that you've harmed Dawn, I'll get you."

He turned and crossed to join his comrades. Shep, too startled to make answer, stared after him. Then, summoning his blacks he started toward the tree where the natives were acclaiming their bride.

"Hey, white man," he called after Tom. "Why don't all you Englishmen sing dat Tipperary song in honor of de wooden god's bride. Look over by dat tree dere. Dawn am a wife now."

The ceremonies over, Dawn returned with Mooda and her maids to the Temple. Now a goddess! The realization made her faint. For the first time she felt lost to Tom and doubted that he would keep his promise to return to her. In time, away from her, he would forget her, become attracted to other girls—white girls.

She remembered his questions to her, suggesting that she might be white. But no—her white skin was a blessing bestowed by Malungu, whom she must now serve as a devoted bride. Wearily she dismissed her maids, disrobing herself with Mooda's occasional aid. She lay down, too tired even for regrets and loneliness.

"Mooda," she said after a silence, "many white folks at the cauteen think I am white girl."

"No, my precious Dawn," Mooda hurriedly disillusioned her, "your father a great native chief. I often tell you."

"Tom say my father white," persisted the girl, "and would not like me to stand naked under the moon. Tom is sure I am white."

It was a topic that frightened Mooda. "Tom is like all white folks. He lie to my Dawn. Always deceive her."

Dawn rose, her eyes flashing dangerously. "Tom loves me. I love him. He never tell lies. I shall tell them, the natives, that we love each other. I shall tell them now that I am an unfaithful bride."

The girl's announcement gave Mooda her desired opportunity to silence forever the girl's protestation of her love for Tom. "If you tell them they kill you. Tom can't help you. He forgets you. White man always forgets native girl!"

"Not my Tom. He won't forget—never!"

"Look." At the window Mooda pointed toward the bridge. Curious, Dawn crossed the room and stared through the glass. Tom was crossing the bamboo bridge to join the other prisoners. She saw him fix his pack securely to his shoulders and, as the men sang, walk briskly with them along the trail to Taber.

"He go to England!" she whispered, turning her eyes to Mooda. The black woman nodded slowly. "Yes," she said sepulchral, "England. The white man always the same. He break native girl heart and then go away to his own kind."

Heart-breaking sobs shook Dawn's body. "Not my Tom! My Bwana. Not No!"

Mooda took the unhappy girl protectively into her arms. "Everywhere it is the same. Mooda knows. Woman gives and remembers. Men take—and forget. He won't come back to Africa."

Dawn felt as if a great wound had opened within her, hurting her. It was a wound impossible to soothe. It weakened her, and saddened her, too. But it also made her curiously indifferent to whatever future she faced as the goddess of the natives. The blackness she once anticipated no longer seemed so important. Nothing was important.

When she spoke to Mooda her voice was no longer broken. It was well controlled, but lifeless. "No," she said, "I think Tom will come back to me no more."

Each day in the temple was an endless bore to Dawn. At first the natives accorded her the frightened reverence the bride of Malungu might be expected to command, but soon this gave way to a surly dislike. The natives were displeased with the listless, and at times contemptuous, manner with which the new Tabu addressed herself to her exalted role.

It wasn't that Dawn was unsympathetic, or indifferent to the innumerable ills she was called upon to cure. Her attitude, it may be, was conditioned largely by her exasperation with the natives trusting demands on her. They blindly accepted her as a miracle worker and a power of good, despite their dislike of her. At times Dawn suspected that her attachment to Tom actuated their dislike.

The Maid of Malungu encouraged this suspicion, though indirectly. When she returned from the canteen bringing word of the progress of the war and the activities of the whites, the Maid invariably made a meaningful reference to Tom. It was always the same, that there had been no word of the departed prisoners, hence nobody could be sure whether they had ever reached Taber.

For weeks Dawn remained in the seclusion of her temple, venturing out only on unlighted nights. She was afraid of the moon, afraid of the bitter memories of that night in the Place of the White Moon when last she had spoken with Tom. The moon had become a sort of intermediary between her and Tom. When, from the darkness of the temple, she looked upon it she beheld it as a sentry stationed there by the absent Englishman.

In the stillness of one such night, fascinated by this sentry's white glow, she wandered out of the temple. With steps which were not directed by her conscious mind she proceeded toward the Place of the White Moon. She seemed hypnotized, helpless against the urge that guided her feet.

There in the clearing she beheld the chains, now fallen to the earth which had bound her to the oppressive Malungu and the still more oppressive sovereignty of the unlettered blacks. For the first time, since the day she had watched him cross the shabby bamboo bridge out of her sight, she recalled Tom with a feeling of bitter poignance.

She crossed to the flat rock where they had sat through most of the last long night, she in his arms, he vowing that he would return for her. Hopelessly she sighed. She was glad Tom still had the power of reviving her regrets. She determined to come again to the clearing; it was an escape from the interminable drabness of the temple of worship.

As she stepped from the clearing to the trail leading back to the temple, she encountered Shep. From his confident manner she deduced that he had been watching her. Her first feeling was one of alarm. She knew Shep desired to get her at a disadvantage to discredit her with the worshippers, and now he had achieved this desire.

SAY what else you may about the movies, the original cast always travels with the film.

Plan Bigger Program For Doylestown Fair

"So much favorable comment has been heard about the horse show at the Doylestown Fair last year that many well known exhibitors have expressed a desire to come to Doylestown if a horse show ring is built," Mr. Lee told the fair officials.

"Doylestown is right on the edge of a great community of people where the saddle horse craze is sweeping the section," declared Mrs. H. W. Turner, wife of the fair president. "It is an opportunity for the Doylestown Fair to have this limit increased and to bring to Doylestown the enthusiasts of the saddle and show horse game this year by offering them the proper kind of appointments."

Reports from other department heads of the fair indicate that in every detail the 1930 fair will surpass any exhibition ever dreamed of in Bucks county.

The Doylestown Fair has been selected in every section of Pennsylvania and in some other states as a "model fair." One of the interesting facts is that the Doylestown Fair is one of the very few in the entire state that exhibits only disease-free cattle, hogs, poultry and other stock.

Mrs. William Moss, of Locust street, who recently fell and dislocated a knee joint is slowly recovering from the effects of her injury.

Miss Harriet Leech, a former prominent Bristolian, now of St. Davids, has left for a lengthy stay with friends in San Francisco, California, and with relatives in Seattle, Washington.

Mrs. John Wood, of Langhorne, was hostess at a lawn party at her home recently. Among the guests were: Mr. and Mrs. James LaRue and daughter, Miss Elizabeth LaRue, of 803 Radcliffe street; Mr. and Mrs. Walter P. Leedom, of 254 Radcliffe street, and granddaughter, Miss Charlotte Cadwallader, of Yardley, and Miss Elizabeth Weeks, of 916 Radcliffe street.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Fox, of Salem, N. J., who have just returned from a honeymoon spent via motor in New York and Canada, were visitors this week of Mrs. Fox's mother, Mrs. Mary C. McIlvaine, of Radcliffe street, and of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Fox, also of Radcliffe street.

bottom. The head-piece was cap-shaped and was trimmed with pearls and rhinestones. White satin slippers and white silk stockings completed her costume and she carried a shower bouquet of white roses and lilies of the valley.

The maid of honor, Miss Scalda was attired in a pretty gown of blue dotted silk net, made bodice effect, sleeveless and had a Bertha collar in the back, which extended over the shoulders. The skirt was long and full and a large pink satin flower was caught at the waistline. Her slippers and stockings were white and she wore a Greta Garbo hat trimmed with satin ribbon to match her dress and carried an arm bouquet of pink roses tied with green satin ribbon.

Miss Rago, the bridesmaid, looked attractive in a sleeveless gown of pink silk net over crepe, the bodice of which was close-fitting and trimmed with a Bertha collar in the back, also extending over the shoulders. The neckline was V-shaped and the skirt was long and full and trimmed with two tiers of silk net. At the waistline on the left side in the front and on the skirt on the left side in the back, gracefully hung small pink satin bows, the long ends reaching the bottom of her skirt. With this was worn a Greta Garbo horsehair hat trimmed with satin ribbon to match her gown and her slippers and stockings were white. She carried an arm bouquet of pink roses tied with pink satin ribbon.

The groom and the best man were attired in tuxedo suits.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held in St. Ann's Hall on Logan street. About two hundred guests were present. Delia's orchestra furnished the music and refreshments were served. During the evening, a six-layer wedding cake was cut. Mr. and Mrs. Greco left late Sunday evening for a honeymoon trip and will be away for one week. The bride's traveling costume was a powder blue crepe dress with hat to match and she wore black slippers, tan stockings and carried a tan coat. Mr. and Mrs. Greco will reside at 7435 Meridian street, Holmesburg, in their newly-furnished home.

The bride is a resident of Bristol and attended both the public and high schools. The groom was born in Italy but has been a resident in this country for the past fifteen years. He is employed with the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company in Philadelphia.

Mr. and Mrs. Greco received a number of beautiful gifts from their many friends. Guests attending the wedding were from Bristol, Trenton, New York and Philadelphia.
